After a year of research, development, and consultations, including last year's session at World Water Week 2019, the Asian Water Development Outlook (AWDO) 2020 will soon be published. This session will share the latest water security findings from AWDO across each of its five key dimensions together with key governance and finance considerations and country case studies in the context of water security policymaking and consideration of water-related climate risks. Partner organizations who jointly contributed to this new AWDO edition will facilitate and frame the discussion. •
