Gender-Responsive Stakeholder Engagement

We want to avoid this...

European Bank
for Reconstruction and Development

Why is Gender Responsive Stakeholder Engagement Process (SEP) important?

- A complete view
- Different perspective
- Different access to decision-making
- Requires a concerted effort

Gender-responsive stakeholder engagement (cont'd)

How to conduct a SEP?

- Identify affected and interested stakeholders
- Try to identify a representative mix of stakeholders
- Understand/set the context
- Provide capacity-bldg. for women stakeholders
- Put in place grievance mechanisms

CASE: ONEE Water Supply (Morocco)

European Bank
for Reconstruction and Development

EBRD gender action:

- Increase women's participation in Water User Committees (WUCs)

Emphasis on participation and agency:

- Project to target women at household level.

Gender assessment for Clean Technology Fund (CTF) – District Heating

Gender analysis:

- Mapping supply & demand factors influencing women's access to district heating services
- Selected municipalities in Ukraine and Kazakhstan.

Expected result:

- Enhanced opportunities for women's employment in the sector.
- More women's participation in decision-making over price setting.
- Improved affordability, design and delivery of district heating services.
