A photograph of a large group of women, many wearing traditional headscarves, with their hands raised in a gesture of protest or solidarity. The image has a green tint. The women are looking in various directions, some towards the camera, some away. The background is slightly blurred, focusing attention on the women in the foreground.

“These are not just stories. They are wounds we live with.”

A group of people, including women and children, are wading through a flooded path. They are carrying large, heavy bundles on their heads and backs. The water is murky and reflects the overcast sky. The scene is overlaid with a green tint. The text "When risks cross boundaries, solutions must too." is centered over the image.
