Find Your Bank

Payment Information – Step 3

Payment Information Steps

Step 3: Intermediary Bank

For international transactions, when ADB or other banking institutions don't have a direct relationship with your bank, an Intermediary Bank, also known as Correspondent Bank, is necessary to facilitate the transfer.

By default, the option is set to "Yes" if your chosen currency is different from the domestic currency of your bank's country. You can select No if your bank does not require an intermediary bank based on instructions from your bank representative. Conversely, the option is set to "No" if your selected currency is the domestic currency of your bank's country. You can select Yes if your bank operates locally and requires an intermediary bank to facilitate payment receipt from international banks. If your selected currency is "USD" or "PHP" and your bank branch is in ADB Headquarters in Manila, Philippines, the option is preset to "No" and is not edited.

Do you need an intermediary bank for transmitting payments to your bank? ☒ Yes ☐ No

To set up your intermediary bank, please follow these instructions:

1. The process train illustrates a series of upward-pointing arrows, outlining the path through which payments will be transmitted from the Sender (ADB) to the Receiver (your Beneficiary bank).
2. By default, an empty intermediary bank section is displayed. To choose your preferred intermediary bank, simply click the magnifying glass icon located on the right side of the "Bank" field. The list of intermediary banks available is derived from Swift's intermediary bank database and filtered based on your selected beneficiary bank. However, if your beneficiary bank lacks a Swift BIC, it is necessary for you to manually search for and select your preferred intermediary bank.
3. To add an intermediary bank, click the "Add Intermediary Bank" button. You have the option to specify up to three (3) intermediary banks if required. The system will automatically insert the new entry beneath the existing intermediary bank record. The list of available intermediary banks is derived from Swift's intermediary bank database and is filtered based on the intermediary bank you have recently defined.
4. To remove a recently added intermediary bank, simply click on the "Delete" icon positioned before the corresponding train label. Please bear in mind that you can only delete the most recent intermediary bank record added in the process train.

It's important to note that when multiple intermediary banks are specified, ADB will transmit the payment starting with the first intermediary bank on the list, which is the one located above the Sender in the process train. The payment will then pass through the intermediary banks in between, with the last intermediary bank, positioned below the Receiver in the process train, serving as the final stop before the payment reaches your beneficiary bank.

Additionally, please be aware that intermediary banks may deduct fees, and these fees, as well as processing times, can vary depending on the banks involved and the specific transfer arrangements. For the most cost-effective intermediary bank option, we recommend consulting with your bank representative.
